

Detroit Free Press www.freep.com

7-DA

NEWS SPORTS ENTERTAINMENT BUSINESS FEATURES OPINION ARCHIVES

Advertisement

Photos (click to enlarge)

METRO DETROIT

Metro Detroit toddler taps into talent

21-month-old boy shines on the drums

March 8, 2006

BY EMILIA ASKARI
FREE PRESS STAFF WRITER

Email this Print this

Reach more than 2 million readers each week. Advertise in The Detroit News and Free Press - in print and on the Internet. marketplacedetroit.com

"Go, baby!" Bernie Pavone of Bloomfield Hills yells.

zoom

Julian Pavone plays drums at home in Bloomfield Hills on Tuesday. He could soon make an appearance on ABC's "Good Morning America." (RICHARD LEE/Detroit Free Press)

More Metro Detroit

- Dearborn pays big for ragged building
- ENGINEERING FOR THE FUTURE: Robot-building puts students to the test

Today's top stories

- SPARTANS 61, ILLINI 56: MSU derails Illinois
- SIGNS OF SAGGING DEMAND: Houses everywhere, but few buyers to close sale
- Dearborn pays big for ragged building
- HIGH SCHOOL STATE CHAMPIONSHIPS: Behind the glory
- WATERFRONT LIVING: FLOWING IDEAS

His son, 21-month-old Julian Pavone, grins and bangs his drumsticks against the snare in front of his high chair, then he twists and pings a cymbal or two before turning back to the DW drum set and whaling away as he sucks his pacifier.

After a quick session, he peeks up at his mother, aunt, cousin and grandmother, who are sitting on steps watching the impromptu concert. They clap admiringly and cheer.

"See," said his grandmother, Gloria Tactac of Bloomfield Hills, "he's looking at the audience like, 'Come on, give me some love.' The kid loves an audience."

Julian has played before some big audiences lately. A couple weeks ago, he debuted before about 30,000 fans of the Cleveland Cavaliers, getting a standing ovation for his 2-minute improvisation during the fourth-quarter break.

Detroit's WDIV-TV (Channel 4) broadcast live from his house Tuesday night.

Julian's drumsticks fly joyously as he attacks his large, professional-looking drum set, his toy drums, a coffee table.

But as to whether he's truly a prodigy drummer as his father and family

RELATED LINKS:

- TELL YOUR STORY: What kind of cool tricks did your child do at Julian's age?
- VIDEO: See and hear Julian play the drums

Adve

friends proudly claim, at least one expert expressed reservations.

"A prodigy is someone who's playing at an elite level at an abnormally young age," said Kendra Whitlock, director of pops and specials for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. "It's not just banging around and keeping time."

Julian is still a toddler who sometimes throws his sticks on the ground and doesn't want to play when he's tired.

Still, Whitlock acknowledged that many kids less than 2 years old would have trouble holding drumsticks. "Most kids don't have the motor skills to do that," she said.

Julian's father's recording company is preparing a CD of the toddler playing, called "Go, Baby!"

Bernie Pavone, 40, said he discovered Julian's interest in drums when his son was 3 months old.

Julian was in a harness on his father's lap as Bernie Pavone played. Julian grabbed the sticks and took a turn.

Julian now is at the drums half an hour to two hours a day, not all in one stretch.

Famed jazz bassist Ralphe Armstrong of Detroit was impressed.

"He's a genius," said Armstrong, who initially was skeptical when Bernie Pavone, an old acquaintance, called and asked him to listen to his son play.

Julian also has won the heart of drummer William Winfield III of Cleveland, who is the Cavaliers' drum line coordinator. He met Julian a couple months ago after closing a business deal with Bernie Pavone.

To learn more about Julian, go to www.littledrummerbaby.com.

 Email this

 Print this